GUIDE TO PRESERVATIVE TREATED WOOD

Preservative treatment provides wood with added durability. However, it's a mistake to assume that all pressure treated wood is the same. Whilst one piece of treated wood may look very much like any other, the level of preservative protection could be very different. That's because the British Standard for wood preservation – BS 8417, requires that the loading and penetration of preservative, impregnated into the wood, is tailored to the desired end use.

BUILD YOUR OWN

Building your own bespoke garden structure is easier than you may think and so rewarding. It's also a great way to keep yourself busy until social restrictions are lifted and you can show off your outdoor handiwork.

Show us your skills

Step 1 Base

- Measure out and clear a perfectly level space
- Create a solid base from your choice of plastic panels, Trex composite joists, concrete blocks, or paving stones (pictured above)

Step 2 Base Frame

- Lay a dampproof membrane over your foundation to prevent moisture from rising
- Lay C16 or C24 as base joists on top of your DPM
- Insulate from the base by laying Celotex between the joists
- Overlay the joists with Cabershield Weatherdeck Board, Trex Composite Decking, Arbordeck or 18mm OSB board

Step 3 Framing & Walls

- Build your stud wall framing using 50x75mm CLS/Scant (or 47x50mm/47x75mm treated)
- Affix Geotextile Framing Membrane to the outer face for extra weather protection
- Board the outer face walls with either sheathing plywood or treated cladding e.g. 19x125mm/150mm treated shiplap, 25x100mm loglap. If budget allows, consider a thermal cedar or composite cladding
- Use timber scant to frame windows and door openings.

Step 4 Flooring & Roofing

- Create your roof frame using CLS, C16 or C24 timber sections (47x75mm or 47x100mm)
- Use OSB boards or chipboard for the roof's sheet materials
- Use Cure It GRP waterproofing system or a DPM, before covering with a high-quality roof felt or cedar roofing shingles
- Add optional additional flooring if not using decking such as vinyl or laminate.

Step 5 Things to consider

- If you will spend long periods of time inside your build:
- Insulate between stud walls using Celotex or Rockwool
- Overlay insulation with plasterboard or PIR insulated bonded plasterboard
- Favourite cladding choices include Shiplap, Loglap and PGTV
- You may want to paint or stain the cladding, or apply a coat of UV inhibitor to retain the freshly finished look of your beautiful new garden building
